The University Provided Events for Local Farmers and Food Producers to Connect and Transfer Knowledge

Our university plans gatherings for local farmers and food producers to meet and learn from each other. These events are like friendly get together where folks can share their experiences. We set up easy workshops and meetings to help everyone connect and pick up useful tips. Our main goal is to support them in collaborating, sharing what they know, and making farming and producing food even better. It's all about working together for a stronger and more successful community.
